Credit for Prior Learning - Methods

Definition: Credit for prior learning (CPL) is credit awarded for validated college-level skills and knowledge gained outside of a college classroom—it's a strategy to grant students credit for what they already know and can do.

Credit for prior learning may be obtained in the following ways:

- Credit through satisfactory completion of examination (CBE)
- Faculty assessment of a portfolio or documentation of college-level knowledge/skills and/or college-level training not acquired at an institution of higher learning, such as industry recognized credentials or training (IRT)
- Evaluation of a Military Joint Service Transcript (MJST)
- Achievement of a satisfactory score on the Advanced Placement (AP) examination
- Achievement of a satisfactory score on a high-level International Baccalaureate (IB) examination
- Achievement of a satisfactory score on the College Level Examination Program (CLEP)

Credit for Prior Learning - Student Eligibility

Students may petition for Credit for Prior Learning if they meet the following:

- The student must be currently registered in the District
- The student must be in good academic standing in the District and have a student educational plan on file
- The student is not currently enrolled in the course to be challenged
- The course to be challenged is listed in the current College Catalog
- Pertaining to Credit by Examination: The student is registered in the District and not currently enrolled in nor received credit for a more advanced course in the same subject (may be waived by department)
- Note: Credits acquired by CPL assessment shall not be counted in determining the 12 semester hours of credit in residence required for an Associate Degree.
